PARADISE FOUND IN DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

A native of Dominican Republic himself, late designer Oscar de la Renta held the region always close to his heart. Puntacana Resort & Club itself dates back to 1971 and now encompasses expansive estates which includes the Tortuga Bay Hotel. In 1997, the designer joined the group as a co-investor and since then, this has sort of become a second home for him where he also maintained his own residence within. It was of course natural that Oscar de la Renta left his touch on this community, and his effortless passion for design came to life when he was called upon for redesigning the quarters of Tortuga Bay. A refurbished debut in 2014 brought about his signature touches through clean, crisp furnishings, natural materials such as wicker, rattan, and mahogany, and sunburst yellow wrapping it all up in a scenic display of happiness. Most certainly his vision of what the perfect Dominican life should be like. And not just within the living spaces, the designer also worked his magic on their restaurant—Bamboo—that offers fusion dishes with Mediterranean influences—amidst a cozy setting perfect for a date night over fresh seafood. Additionally, Tortuga Bay features Oscar de la Renta's first resort wear boutique, a 1,000-square feet store tucked between the villas, and offering all his lines of chic goodies. The best part? The boutique carries inspired jewellery by him exclusive to the location; no doubt mementos we want and covet.
